Meſſen. Madame, I bring you newes from Ireland,
The wilde Onele my Lords, is vp in armes,
With troupes of Iriſh Kernes, that vncontrolde
Doth plant themſelues within the Engliſh pale.
And burnes and ſpoiles the Country as they go.
Qu. What redreſſe ſhall we haue for this, My Lords?
Yorke. 'Twere good that my Lord of Somerſet
That fortunate Champion were ſent ouer,
To keepe in awe the ſtubborne Iriſhmen,
He did ſo much good when he was in France.
Somer. Had Yorke bene there with all his farre fetcht
Pollicies, he might haue loſt as much as I.
Yorke. I, for Yorke would haue loſt his life, before
That France ſhould haue reuolted from Englands rule.
Somer. I ſo thou mightſt, and yet haue gouern'd worſe then I.
Yorke. What, worſe then naught? then a ſhame take all.
Somer. Shame on thy ſelfe, that wiſheth ſhame.
Queen. Somerſet forbeare, good Yorke be patient,
And do thou take in hand to croſſe the ſeas,
With troopes of armed men, to quell the pride
Of thoſe ambitious Iriſh that rebell.
Yorke. Well Madame, ſith your Grace is ſo content,
Let me haue ſome bandes of choſen ſoldiers,
And Yorke ſhall trie his fortunes 'gainſt thoſe Kernes.
Queen. Yorke thou ſhalt. My Lord of Buckingham,
Let it be it your charge to muſter vp ſuch ſoldiers
As ſhall ſuffice him in theſe needfull warres.
Buck. Madame, I will, and leuie ſuch a band
As ſoone ſhall ouercome thoſe Iriſh Rebels.
But Yorke, where ſhall thoſe Soldiors ſtay for thee?
Yorke. At Briſtow, I'le expect them ten daies hence.
Buck. Then thither ſhall they come, and ſo farwell.

Exit Buck.

Yorke. Adieu my Lord of Buckingham.
Queen. Suffolke, remember what you haue to do.
And you Lord Cardinall, concerning Duke Humfrey.
T'were good that you did ſee to it in time,

Come let vs go, that it may

Yorke. Now Yorke bethi
Take time whilſt it is offer
Leaſt when thou wouldſt, t
T'was men I lackt, and nov
And now whilſt I am buſie
I haue ſeduc'd a head-ſtron
Iohn Cade of Aſhford,
Vnder the title of Iohn Mo
(For he is like him euery ki
To raiſe commotion, and b
I ſhall perceiue how the co
Do affect the claime and h
Then if he haue ſucceſſe i
From Ireland then comes
To reape the harueſt which
Now if he ſhould be taken
Hee'l nere confeſſe that I d
And therefore ere I go ile
To put in practiſe and to g
That ſo ſoone as I am gon
To riſe in armes with troo
To helpe him to performe
And then Duke Humfrey,
None then can ſtop the lig
But Yorke can tame, and

Then the Curtaines being dr bed, and two men lying on
And then enter the Duke
Suff. How now ſirs, wh
One. I my Lord, hee's de
Suff. Then ſee the cloath
That when the King com
No other, but that he dide

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE Henry VI. Parts 2 & 3 (STC 26101) LONDON, 1619 UNIVERSITY OF EDINBURG